

Children's day 2025

Sparrow B celebrated Children's Day on 14th November 2025 with a joyful and heart-warming assembly presentation. The program was to highlight the unique strengths, of every child.

The celebration began with a greeting song by all the children. Their cheerful voices set a warm and festive tone for the event. The presentation could not be complete without having Pt. Jawaharlal Nehru come and talk about himself.

This was followed by a story role play. Sparrows dramatized a short story on uniqueness that makes every child special. The story centered around a young girl who struggled to discover her own strengths. She believed she was not special in anyway and often felt sad. In the story, all the children prepared to show their strengths and talents, or even talk about their special qualities. They enjoyed presenting these to their friends. Some children chose to sing, some chose to dance. Some spoke about how independently they were able to do their work while some showed how good they were in sports.

Anaisha, continued to cheer for her friends. She hugged them, wished them good luck, and encouraged them with positive words like, "Come on, you can do it!" She watched her friends and clapped for them with joy. She told them how proud she was to watch them do great things. Her kindness shone brightly even though she felt she had nothing special to show or talk about.

When the teacher finally called her name, she became sad, thinking she had nothing to talk about. However, at that moment, her friends, teacher, and the audience revealed the truth—they had all discovered her special strength - Kindness.

At the end her friends make Anaisha aware about how kind she is to others. Anaisha discovers something she didn't know about herself.

The event concluded with a lively superhero dance, reminding everyone that each of us carries a superhero within—the power of kindness, the power of happiness, and the power of being ourselves.

Warm Regards
